Enquiry Question of the week

How has feminism changed England?

Before WW2, the role of women was very different, where most stayed at home and took care of the household and children. During WW2, many women had to take on roles traditionally held by men. After WW2, initially, women were forced out of the workplace as returning soldiers needed jobs. However, women, having had a taste of a job outside of the home, wanted more. They met with much resistance and still encounter it today to some degree, in some workplaces. The change of women's roles has had huge effects on childcare, education, expectations, pay, sports, opportunities etc.

A summary of next week:

In History, we have looked at why Britain has become such a multicultural country since the war, with a particular focus on the Empire Windrush, bringing people from the Caribbean to the UK to help rebuild Britain.

Create an advertising poster persuading people to come to the UK to make it strong again. The link above should help remind you.

Bronze

We have looked at different bar charts recently. Choose a sports team. Represent one aspect of their statistics as a bar chart. For example number of goals scored in games, cards given or attendance at games.

Spelling words to learn: (starting next week)

The spelling pattern is: to spell words with homophones. For example: affect/effect, see/scene, who's/whose etc.
