Enquiry Question of the week

1. How and when did Britain become the multicultural place that it is today?
Over time, since even before the Romans invaded Britain, there have been many waves of immigration. Post WW2, Britain advertised to its colonies in order to increase its workforce, especially in the NHS, and help rebuild Britain. Lots of people (especially ex-service men and women) came and settled here, including those on the Windrush. Some of these people were met with prejudice and discrimination.
