Enquiry Question of the week

Who were the Athenians and Spartans? How have they influenced our lives today?

Athens was, and still is, both the capital city of Greece, and also the largest city in the country. Athens operated as a hub of the economic, political, financial, and cultural affairs in Greece. The city was also symbolic of freedom, art, and democracy for the civilised world. In contrast to this, Sparta was a much smaller town, that was located near the river Evrotas, in the heart of the Peloponnese in the south of Greece. Whilst Athens was the home of freedom, Sparta was the Dorian Greek military state, and was responsible for the protection of Greece. Sparta supplied a huge army to defend Greece for a number of years.
